CRABBY DICK PULLS OUT NEW ERA FOR DELAWARE CITY ON THE HORIZON

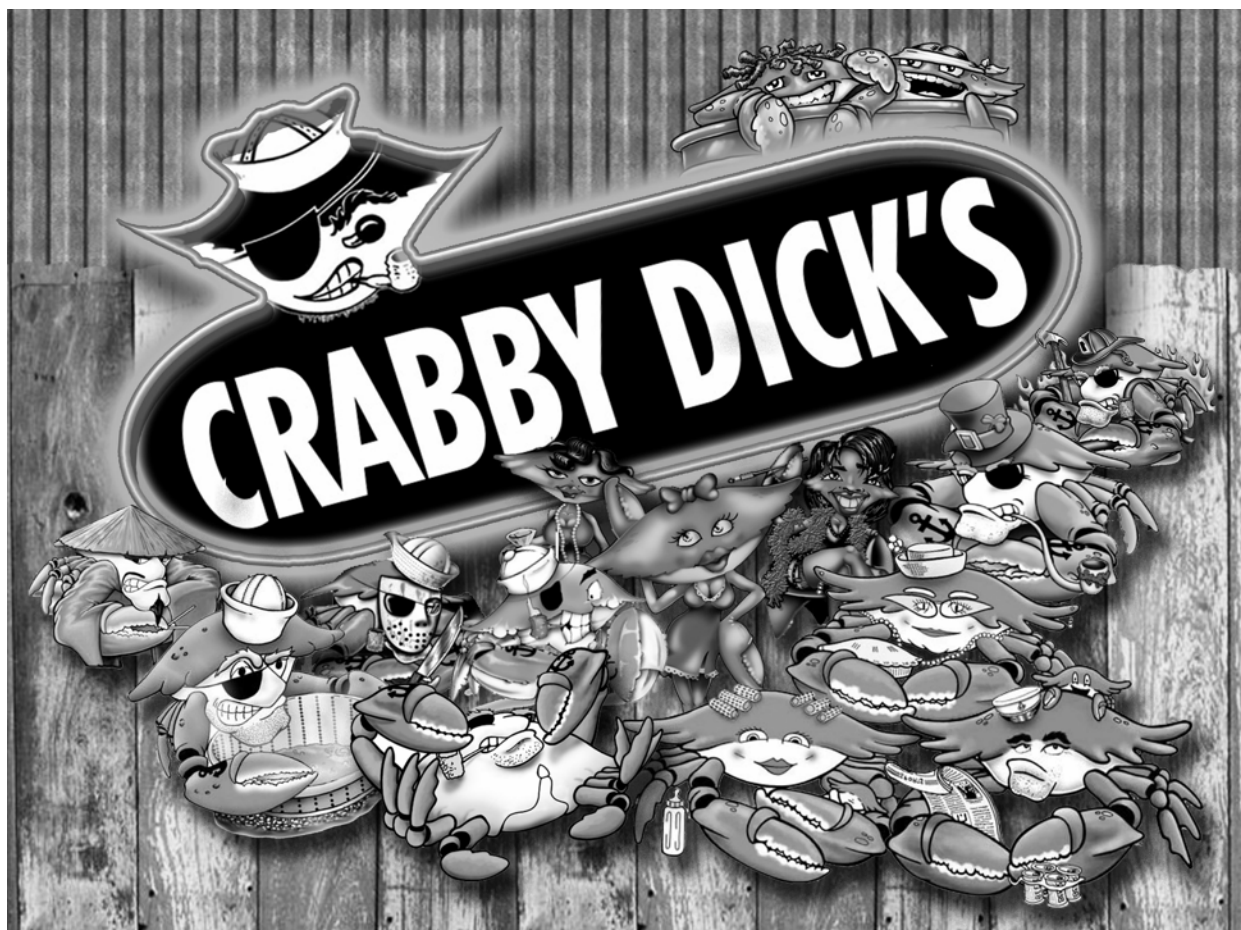

DELAWARE CITY—After twenty years of serving up his legendary crabcakes, stuffing buns with his famous seafood, and giving locals a taste of his hearty home cooking, Crabby Dick is packing up his kitchen and heading south. That's right—Crabby has officially sold his Dick to Rehoboth Beach, and now he needs to shake things up in Delaware City.

"I've had a hell of a run here," said Crabby, waving a claw as he wiped a sentimental tear from his shell. "But since I sold my Dick to Rehoboth, it's time for me to move on and change up the game here in Delaware City. A crab's gotta do what a crab's gotta do!"

His beloved wife, Anita, has been by his side through thick and thin, and she's ready to make the move, too. "We've always had a thing for the beach," Anita said with a wink. "And now we finally get to enjoy it together. Crabby's been working so hard for so long—it's time for him to let loose, relax, and maybe even get a little wet and wild."

Of course, Crabby isn't making this move alone. His children—Harry, Seymour, and Ophelia—along with the entire Dick family, are packing up their kitchen tools, their secret recipes, and their unforgettable sense of humor for the big move. "It's a family affair," Crabby said. "And trust me, when the whole Dick family gets together, things can get messy."

While Delaware City is sad to see Crabby and his Dick leave, the town will always have fond memories of the good times. "I'll miss the that old Crabby Dick, sure," said longtime regular Salty Pete. "But what I'll really miss is watching Anita work her magic in the kitchen. That crab knew how to handle a steamer, and boy, did she know how to keep her customers satisfied."

But before you get too down in the claws about it, there's good news—something fresh and exciting is on the horizon to take the place of Crabby Dick's! Though details remain hush-hush for now, locals can rest assured that Delaware City won't be left hungry for long.

"I'm leaving some big shoes to fill," Crabby admitted. "Or, well, big claws. But I know Delaware City is in good hands, and I can't wait to see what pops up in my old spot."

Until then, let's raise a toast (and a bib) to Crabby Dick! May his days in Rehoboth be full of sunshine, smooth sailing, and plenty of butter for dipping.

NEWS FLASH: CRABBY DICK'S LEGACY WILL GO ON

Ever since he was just a little Dick, Crabby roamed the cobblestoned streets of Fells Point, itching to create his own legacy. As Crabby got bigger, he knew he had to find his mate. There was only one she-crab for Crabby and her name was Anita. Anita was also well kown by the local sailors that came into the port. You see, Anita had been "around The Block" and was looking for a jimmy to call her own. As fate would have it (plus Crabby baiting Anita with some juicy chicken necks), Crabby and Anita were wed and the Dick Family Tree was rooted.

Soon there were little Dicks all over Fells Point. Crabby and Anita had three sons, Harry Dick, Seymour Dick and Hoss Dick and one daughter, Candy Dick. Candy later became famous for her "Homemade Candy Dick Suckers" that once you start sucking you can't stop until you reach the stick. So Crabby had his family but still needed his legacy.

Crabby asked his cousin, Curly Dick (who by the way has the best balls on Broadway especially when dipped in his secret recipe Seaman Sauce), how he could create the Crabby Dick Legacy. Curly just shrugged his claws and kept dipping his balls. Then an idea hit Crabby, like a mallet cracking his shell (OUCH), Crabby would seek wisdom from the wisest Dick of all, Hung Lo Dick of the Far East (Eastern Shore, that is).

Hung Lo Dick was very old and very wise. He advised Crabby, "To create a legacy, you must live a good life, treat all people with the respect that you expect for yourself and wear your name proudly. When you achieve this, you will achieve your legacy."

Crabby thanked Hung Lo for his wisdom and thought long and hard about what the old crab had said. ".....and wear your name proudly." And it finally came to him...T-Shirts. That was the answer to creating his legacy. Crabby printed up shirts with "Maryland is for Crabby Dick's" and gave them to everyone he knew. Soon you could see Crabby Dick's everywhere. Meanwhile, back at the Dick house in Fells Point. People were coming from miles away to see Crabby Dick. Of course, Mama Dick had to feed all these weary travelers so she started cooking up her dee-li-cious Crab Cakes and Curly's Crab Balls. Thus, the first Crabby Dick's restaurant came to be.

The invasion of the Dick's to Delaware came without warning as over 20 years ago Crabby longed to be close to the salt air and ocean breezes of Rehoboth Beach. (Tax-Free at that) In Rehoboth Beach, they all loved the Dick's. So much so, that the Dick's could not whip up enough of their homemade Seaman Sauce and had to begin bottling it up and selling by the jar. With the success Crabby felt at the beach, he decided to service all the folks in Delaware at both ends of the state by taking over an old tavern and inn in Delaware City just north of the canal.

But the time has come and Old Crabby has decided he needed to slow down and with that thought in mind...he sold his Dick to a new generation of restaurateurs in Rehoboth Beach. But alas, Delaware City will be the home of a new and exciting restaurant. Stay tuned for details !
